This Is the Real "Home-Coming" Week

How many strange faces one sees on the streets this week! Most of them not exactly strange, but old familiar faces that we have missed for awhile and are now "back home" to spend the holidays with parents, sons and daughters. It is the one week of the entire year that we forget the stress and storms of our business lives, and are renewing the friendships and affections of past years. It is a season of gladdened hearts, the good old mother and father rest secure in the love and respect of their offspring, who have come to the big city to dwell and made their homes here. The young who have sought their destiny elsewhere are back in the old home nest to be children again with their loved father and mother. It is a glorious time and rekindles all that is good and true in our bosoms. The youth who are "away at school" also share in the season's joyousness and after the past semester's hard plugging are enjoying well earned rest and recreation. Their bright, happy faces are an inspiration to the old, and their cheery greetings make one young again. The festivities of the season are many, dance and party, family reunions and impromptu gatherings of old friends that will leave many happy memories long after the Christmas week has become history. Who does not enjoy it? The angelic salutation, "Good will to men" seems instilled in the hearts of all people and it is truly a season of great joy.

The Abuse of Credit

One of the strange things about giving credit, is the cheerful manner in which the debtor receives it, and the surly manner in which they treat any effort to collect it. It is not only people of small means who are loath to pay, but the hardest element is those who have the money but are insulted when asked to pay. The retail business is getting to be more of a strictly cash business and is the only fair way to do, but there are some businesses in which it is absolutely necessary to grant credit, and the experiences of collecting even the smallest amounts is very disagreeable. The "chain stores" and "cash and carry" institutions are doing much to wean people from the extravagancies and folly of credit, and some day customers will be ashamed to ask credit of anyone.

A Happy New Year to All

It again becomes our pleasure to wish our readers the sincerest compliments of the season, done up in the hearty "Happy New Year." We have passed many New Years together, many of us, and each seems happier than the ones gone before, and we hope this one of 1925 may be no exception to the rule. Englewood never has been a "boom" town, but it's progress has been steady and unfailing. The coming year should bring us even greater advancement than ever before. Our many improvement and civic organizations have laid out programs for the new year that will mean much to our good old town, and we bespeak for them the heartiest cooperation of all of our citizens. The Times certainly has great plans of advancement for the coming year, and we shall strive as ever to give our readers all of the news worth printing of a local character, eliminating the unfit and sensational. We ask the kindly co-operation of our readers and promise them full returns in the shape of a clean, decent home paper.

Hardships of the Everlasting "Drives"

Ever since the World War, when it became necessary to raise large sums of money and supplies, the organized drive has become a regular occupation for many and scarce a week or day goes by that one is not solicited to contribute to some cause that may be deserving, but that are so multiplied that it has become a serious burden on the family of small means. The "tag-day" is the smallest of these, and few object to the small amounts they exact, but most of the popular drives demand sums that many do not feel able to give, and yet rather than be considered stingy, mean, or niggardly, they put down their names for amounts often times badly needed at home. The average family generally needs all of its income, not only for family sustenance, which is no small matter these days of luxury, but there are children to be educated and oft times sickness and hospital bills to be paid, and maybe the home is not paid for yet, and every penny must be accounted for to make the family income meet the necessary living expense. Also it must be remembered that the "rainy day" must be considered and that the earning years of the head of the family are growing fewer, and that comfortable little provision for old age and infirmity must not be over looked, and woe to them who approach that stage without a nice savings account or a few profitable investments to fall back upon. Be liberal, but first be just to your family and yourself.

Wolves

By Harry Himmel

The American wolf or timber wolf is found in the wild regions of North America, as far north as 27 degrees northern latitude. He is quite as large, if not larger, than the Siberian wolf. He averages in length from five to six feet, and grows to a still larger size in the extreme north. In color he is a grizzly gray, showing reddish in some specimens, and black in others. Those in the Churchill district of the Hudson Bay company have almost white hair, while those from Eskimo bay district are bluish grey in color.

Excepting the Alaskan wolves, which have coarser hair, the American wolves have a finer, denser, longer hair than their European cousins, and their skins are more valuable, especially those of the blue and white variety. The wolves live in burrows, with several outlets, where the young ones are born in litters of from four to five, or sometimes even more.

The formation of the skull and dentition approach closely that of the dog. In fact, the resemblance between the northern wolves and the domestic dog of the Indians is so great that the size and strength of the wolf is merely a variation of the gray wolf, the Indians reporting that quite frequently one or two black whelps are found in a litter of gray wolves.

In Alaska the wolves prey on reindeer, and in other sections moose and elk are their victims. They always travel in packs when hunting the larger animals.

The American wolf does not differ materially from the common wolf of Europe, excepting that the latter are, as a rule, smaller in size. European wolves are still numerous in France, Hungary, Spain, Turkey and Russia. They are crafty and rapacious animals, swift of foot and destructive enemies of the sheepfold and the farmyard. In Russia and Siberia they have been known when pressed by hunger to attack isolated travelers and enter isolated villages and carry off their children. They are cowardly and sneaking in their advances, retreat rapidly if disturbed by a man or dog, and show great cunning in avoiding traps.

The Russian or black wolf is larger than the other European varieties, which are about the size of a large dog, and has long, black tipped hair with thick brownish-red under-fur. The Siberian wolf is larger than the Russian variety and has a much coarser fur, which is lighter in color.

Outside of the American gray or timber wolf we have, in this country, the coyote or prairie wolf, which is, however, rapidly disappearing before the advance of civilization. The coyote is much smaller than any of the more important species of wolves. It is a handsome animal, showing a considerable variation in color, from gray with black tips to the brown and black specimens.

Wolf skins are now being dyed black or blue or other shades and sold either for what they really are or under some fictitious name.

The largest American educational institution in the Near East is the American University of Beirut, Syria.

The United States adopted the eagle as her national emblem in 1783. It is also the ensign of Germany and Russia.

The forum in Rome is said to have been the point of convergence of twenty-four roads during the time of the Roman Empire. These roads and their branches had a total length of 52,904 Roman miles. They learned the art of road building from the Carthaginians.

Our Weekly Poem

DON'T QUIT

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must, but don't you quit.

Life is queer with its twists and turns,
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with another blow.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.

Success is failure turned inside out
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt.
And you can never tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit.

Yellowstone National Park was discovered in 1807 by John Colter, a trapper, who brought news of it to St. Louis, where his story was doubted. Later, he was acclaimed the discoverer of "America's Greatest Wonder."

How Much Milk Do You Use Each Day?

Here is what Bernarr MacFadden, famous health authority, says about this important subject in The Miracle of Milk: "I am willing to go on record as stating . . . ninety per cent of all malnutrition among children everywhere could be cured if two quarts of milk a day were supplied each child.

"I heartily agree with Dr. Graham Lusk when he states that no family of five can afford to purchase a pound of meat until it has first bought at least three quarts of milk."

"African Golf" Among the Indians

By Arthur Woodward

The far famed "African golf," "galloping dominoes," "craps," or, in other words, plain, ordinary dice, existed in one form or another among one hundred and thirty tribes belonging to thirty linguistic stocks of the North American Indians.

The game is one dating back to the dim borderland of the pre-historic era. Graves in Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona that were old when Caesar ruled have given up small dice in various forms.

The dice used by the different tribes are manufactured from a wide variety of materials and are of every shape, size and color.

They are made of wood, bone, shell, stone, pottery disks, ivory, peach and plum pits, beaver and woodchuck teeth, walnut shells, corn seeds, beans, split cane and brass.

All Indians, men and women, are inveterate gamblers. However, unlike our games of chance, many of the Indian games have some ceremonial and religious significance and are played only at certain times.

Others are played as we play them, for amusement and as the dough boy of the A. E. F. played, for "boo koo jack."

Indians have been known to gamble away everything their owned, including their wives and their lives, which is raising the white man's ante to a considerable degree.

As a rule, Indian dice have but two sides that are marked. These markings are of a thousand and one different designs and colors.

The dice are cast either from the hand, a cup, bowl or basket. Many of the stick dice are thrown on stones, either held in the hand or on the ground in front of the player. The object of this is to make the dice bound over and over, thus insuring a fair cast.

The Indian, even as does the white man and the African enthusiast, speaks endearingly to his gaming implements, beseeching the Great Twin Brethren, the Spider Woman or whoever happens to be the deity presiding over that particular game of chance, to cause "Lady Luck" to hover in his or her vicinity.

I have heard some of the younger generation living on the Mesa Grande Reservation coin their own phrases, decidedly modern, and have heard the elder men and women chanting gaming songs so old that even the most ancient of the tribe had forgotten the meaning of the words.

In closing it might be well to add that perhaps the only leaded dice found are those used by the Tlingits of Alaska.

The dice, samples of which are in the American Museum of Natural History, are of ivory and wood, chair shaped, one inch high, twelve-sixteenths of an inch wide at the back and ten-sixteenths of an inch at the side. There are from three to four tiny lead plugs in these dice to give weight to the pieces, and make the casting easier.

Unique Christmas Tree At Garfield-State Garage

One of the most beautiful Christmas trees ever seen in this part of the city—one which revolves—is now on display at the popular Garfield-State Sales and Garage place, 5429-37 S. State st.

This tree was decorated by Mr. William A. Misch, in charge of the Garfield-State, and has ninety beautiful lights and many very pretty cups, etc., and is certainly a most unique tree in every respect.

The Garfield-State Motor Sales and Garage not only does a great deal of car storing, washing, repair work, etc., but handles the wonderful Rickenbacher Six and Eight cars and the Rollin Four.

Go in and see the Christmas tree and also the Rickenbacher and Rollin. You are always welcome.

At the National Theatre

Minnie (Bud) Harrison is a happy Thespian. She is this season a star in her own right, at the head of one of the most compelling attractions in modern burlesque, "Beauty Paraders," coming to the National theater Sunday, December 28. To her great credit, however, "Bud," as Miss Harrison is known familiarly to her host of friends, has surrounded herself wtih a superior cast of principals who have assisted in making her show so alluring. Miss Harrison was well known in vaudeville and in pictures before she decided upon a career in burlesque, and consequently brings to this field an experience of incalculable value. No young woman in Mutual burlesque is better equipped for stardom than Miss Harrison.

Seats are now on sale for our big New Year's Eve show, starting at 11:30. Souvenirs for everybody.

Electric Locomotive Is Superior to Steam

Out of the 8,760 hours in the year, the electric engine can give 6,000 hours of service which produces revenue, and the steam locomotive less than 3,000, according to a computation recently made by William Spencer Murray of New York, widely known electrical engineer and authority on superpower.

He presented that fact and others about power tendencies at the World Power Conference at which more than thirty nations were represented.

Mr. Murray gave his viewpoint on the electrification of railroads with the statement that "the electric locomotive comes, not to supplant, but to supplement.

"The electric locomotive today and for many years to come, will have no more right to operate on lines of very light traffic than has the steam locomotive to operate on lines where the duty required or density has grown beyond its physical attributes to handle."

Disgrace to Have Diptheria, Says Rawlings

Creeping up like mercury in a thermometer on a hot day diphtheria prevalence in Illinois has risen from an average of 65 to 125 cases weekly since July, according to a bulletin issued today by Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director. The increase was not unexpected although it is distinctly deplorable since the disease is positively preventable, said the director. Over 400 of the 6,000 children in the state who have had diphtheria this year have died.

"To sacrifice child life to diphtheria in this enlightened day is disgraceful," declared Dr. Rawlings. "The disease can be prevented by vaccination and it can be cured by the use of antitoxin. Every death from diphtheria is a sign board erected by nature to downright ignorance or carelessness on the part of somebody. Parents should at once consult their family physician relative to getting their children protected against diphtheria.

"If a child is vaccinated against diphtheria he will not get the disease. If a child gets diphtheria he can be cured if antitoxin is given on the first day after onset of illness. These facts are well known to every doctor who is worthy of the name. It is the quacks and pretenders who cause trouble and who are indirectly responsible for many of the deaths from diphtheria.

"There is no reasonable excuse for losing a life because of diphtheria. The state department of health distributes antitoxin free of cost to the citizens of the state who need it. It also distributes oxin-antitoxin with which to vaccinate against diphtheria. Right new we are at the high tide of diphtheria prevalence for the year. Parents will do well to summon medical assistance immediately for any child who manifests such signs of illness as sore throat, headache, fever, nausea or similar ailments. Children will continue to have diphtheria just as long as their parents are willing to pay for it. It costs considerably more than its prevention."

During his lifetime John Wesley preached 27,000 sermons. Canon Hay Aitken, England's greatest revivalist, who hopes to surpass that record, has preached 22,000 sermons.

Every well regulated young man may now expect to receive a handsome Christmas present or a gorgeous necktie, for which he should give "the girl" a diamond of at least a karat in size. But even a necktie is better than the Christmas cigars.

She was most anxious to find out where her husband was, so she rang up a club to which he belonged.

"Is my husband there?" she asked the hall porter.

"No, madam."

"But I haven't even told you my name," said the astonished lady.

"That's all right, madam," said the discreet porter, "nobody's husband is ever here."

Ich Dien

Ich dien, which means "I serve," is the motto of the Prince of Wales. It is a motto which commends itself to the American mind, which recognizes that on the spirit of service depends the well-being of all.

In his personality the prince combines the blood of the ancient Celtic kings, that of the fair-haired vikings, and that of the sturdy Anglo-Saxons, a blend of the best characteristics of the European races, which has endowed him with mental and physical energy of a high order.

The Prince of Wales sought to know something of American ways and American methods, and his wish has been amply gratified; he sought to become acquainted with the democratic spirit of the people of this country, and found it congenial. He has followed in the footsteps of the men of his own race who blazed the trails in America, and has learned that they, too, had for their motto Ich dien.

A Story Lincoln Told

Ex-Senator Cole of California vouches for this story, told by Lincoln: "Old Squire Bagley, from Menard, came into my office one day and said: "Abe, I want your advice as a lawyer. Has a man what's been elected justice of the peace a right to issue a marriage license?" "I told him no; whereupon the old squire threw himself back in his chair very indignantly and said: "Abe, I thought you was a lawyer. Now, me and Bob Thomas had a bet on this thing, and we agreed to let you decide; but if this is your opinion I don't want it, for I know a thunderin' sight better. I've been a squire eight years and I've issued marriage licenses all the time."

Nothing in Quantities

"Did you interview the eminent statesman?" "Yes." "What did he have to say?" "Nothing." "I know that. But how many columns of it?"

Crossing the Line

An expectant air pervades the ship. The passengers are alert, eager, anticipatory of something unusual in the routine of the long voyage. For it is a long-awaited day, one vaguely dreamed of before any possibility of realization revealed itself. We are about to venture into a far region, another part of the great world, a new and an exotic atmosphere. For we cross "The Line" today!

Have you, unless indeed you are already a globe-trotter with a record of a dozen "crossings" and a consequent indifference to such trivial things, dreamed that some day you might pass across the equator? It is a dream common to most, like that of visiting Westminster Abbey, or lingering in the tropical moonlight on a palm-shaded South Sea beach. How, then, has your fancy pictured this epochal event, this passing of another milestone in world-wanderings? You have read of the advent of Father Neptune, attended by his Triton henchmen, and of his levying of tribute upon those intrepid ones who venture for the first time so far into his domains. And you have imagined this equator to be a torrid place where, in the "doldrums," no air ever stirs, where the pitch starts from the deck seams, where everyone is languid beneath a sun which blazes down from directly overhead. And, mingled with your pleasant anticipation of a unique happening, has lain an apprehension of discomfort such as heralds the approach to the furnace heat of the Red Sea passage.

Never, perhaps, has your fancy played you more false. For here this morning, as we come to the lowest rungs of the latitudinal ladder, finally approaching the dark line which map and chart mark "0," how far is everything from discomfort! The ship glides evenly across a smooth sea on which flash in the sunlight the foam-flecks of a breeze as fresh and invigorating as that of a summer afternoon on the New England coast. Flying fish dart from crest to crest, their pirouetting bodies gleaming like diamonds against a setting of sapphire. There is no suggestion of torridity, and the passengers are as vivacious and alert as when we passed out of the Golden Gate. For the voyage has been smooth and serene, productive of naught but contentment. The brief period of warmth which we encountered at about the latitude of ten, north, has long passed; and, marvelous to relate, the air has grown drier and the temperature has fallen as we have approached "The Line!" For so it is on this wonderful, tranquil, happy sea that Balboa so fittingly called the Pacific. Amazement among the untraveled greets the temperate glory of this magnificent morning. The spontaneous laughter of childhood reveals their joy; and merriment greets the retelling of the venerable story of the captain who drew a line across the lens of his telescope, that an insistent passenger might indeed observe "The Line."

And when, during the afternoon, we pass across the magic line of the equator, Father Neptune appears to prove once again his Olympian capacity of being in a hundred parts of the world at once. From his hoary locks of rope yarn drips the brine of unknown depths; he bears the trident which brought awe to the hearts of the Grecian mariners advancing upon Troy; age lies upon his features, yet in his eyes gleams the ferocity of his Jove-defying parent. He advances with the assurance of acknowledged right to his newly prepared throne, and there receives his tribute of homage. His mood is a genial one, as becomes the splendor of his domain and its kindly aspect this afternoon. And presently he departs, assuring us a continuance of fair conditions and milk-warm breezes until we gain our destinations. And so one more experience has come to many of us. We are in the South Seas at last. We have crossed "The Line."

One of Socrates' Parties

It was the custom of the immortal Socrates to foregather with a circle of philosophers and geometricians about a convivial bowl, drawing inspiration from the vintage of Bacchus, nevertheless having a corking time. After the tenth round he would rise—for it is written that he always could rise—and address the symposium. "I move," he would say, "that this circle go home and square itself." And so seriously did the multitude take him that the squaring of the circle grew to be considered impossible, yea, even unto this day.

Prosperous New Year to Our Patrons and Friends

For the remarkable confidence you have shown us during the pre-holiday patronage, we are very grateful to the limit of our capacity.

One of the most gratifying circumstances has been the presence at our store of many of those who have traded here since we first started in business many years ago.

Our view of this fact is that they have come because of their absolute belief in the quality of the merchandise we handle rather than through personal motives.

No merchant could ask for a greater compliment than our volume of trade has expressed to us, and we hope that your new year will be a happy and prosperous one.

Hamilton Park Branch Library

A glance through the reserve files of the Hamilton Park Branch of the Chicago Public library show the most popular books to be Michael Arlen's Green Hat, E. M. Forster's "A Passage to India," John Galsworthy's "White Monkey," Maurois' Ariel, "The Life of Shelley," Anne Sedgwick's "The Little French Girl," Laurence Stalling's "Plumes," Hugh Walpole's "The Old Ladies," and Henry Webster's "The Innocents. It is interesting to note that in spite of the popular belief that the majority of people enjoy and demand the cheapest and lightest of novels, the ones mentioned are all of real merit, the best of this season's offering of literature. Apparently, the patrons of the Hamilton Park Branch Library do enjoy the best, and it is the desire of those whose mission it is to serve their literary wants that the best be always available. The close of 1924 marks an interesting year in the history of this branch, not in any large gain in its clientele or circulation of books, but in the knowledge that many people have been satisfied, many have been initiated into the joys of reading, and many children have learned to amuse themselves while gaining information from library books. The inadequate facilities make promises of greater service for 1925 difficult, but it is safe to assure each person who comes to the library that there is a book, either here or easily procured, for every need, and that help in selecting books and in obtaining answers to questions is gladly given.

Thieves Try to Steal Church Christmas Trees at Bransky

Christmas trees ordered for different churches of Central Englewood were stolen from the commission house of Samuel Bransky, 648 W. 63rd st., at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night by two men who struck the proprietor, making him unconscious for a short time.

His employes gave chase to the thieves and held them in the rear of the establishment until Englewood police arrived. Several large fir trees had been dragged into the yard back of the produce house where an auto without a license was waiting to haul them.

The men when booked gave their names as Herbert Burke, 68th and Green sts., and Samuale Fogarty, 6740 Elizabeth st. They were charged with petty larceny and assault and battery.

The Novel a Modern Invention

It may reasonably be inquired whether the prevailing and still growing taste for fiction expresses a new and enduring want of educated men and women. The novel, as we understand the word, is after all a very recent invention. Considering that we do not find it in existence until late in the last century, its appearance must be admitted to have been very sudden, its growth fabulously rapid, and its development enormous. The ancients had nothing more like it than a few collections of humorous and pathetic stories. The Orientals, who might be supposed to feel the need of it even more than we do, had nothing but their series of fantastic tales strung rather loosely together without general plan. Men and women seem to have survived the dullness of the dark age with the help of the itinerant story-teller. The novel is a distinctly modern invention, satisfying a modern want. . . .

It may fairly be claimed that humanity has, within the past hundred years, found a way of carrying a theater in its pocket, and so long as humanity remains what it is it will delight in taking out its pocket-stage and watching the antics of the actors, who are so like itself and yet so much more interesting. Perhaps that is, after all, the best answer to the question, "What is a novel?" It is, or ought to be, a pocket-stage. Scenery, light, shade, the actors themselves, are made of words and nothing but words, more or less cleverly put together. A play is good in proportion as it represents the more dramatic, passionate, romantic, or humorous sides of real life. A novel is excellent according to the degree in which it produces the illusions of a good play—but it must not be forgotten that the play is the thing, and that illusion is eminently necessary to success.—F. Marion Crawford, in "The Novel."

Women Have To "Get Dressed Up" To Vote

"There are obstacles, seemingly trivial, but none the less serious in their effect on the women voters," says Sarah Schuyler Butler in the November Scribner's Magazine. "These arise from the vagaries of the human character. A very wise politician told us that, in his country, it was very difficult to persuade the women on the farms to vote, because they 'hadn't time to get dressed up.' Apparently the men go to the polls in overalls or working clothes, but feminine vanity decrees that the women must put on their best dresses and hats before they start on such an important errand. There is still another difficulty which this same politician explained to us. Frequently on election day the farmers take a day off. They leave home early in the morning, drive to the polling place, cast their ballot, and stay until dark talking to their friends and discussing the political situation. As a result the women of their families have no chance whatever to vote even if they wish to do so. As we pursued our investigations it was astonishing to find on what trifling considerations the success or failure of a political organization in getting out its voters may depend."

Polar Dogs Transport Wounded Climber on Eiger Glacier

A scene of wild magnificence, a sea of ice descending majestically from the Eiger, one of the silver-locked titans forming the mighty court of the Jungfrau—such is the Eiger Glacier, once an awe-inspiring solitude and now a happy hunting ground of alpinists. The change began to take place when brilliant Swiss engineers built between 1896-1912 the Jungfrau railroad, starting from the smiling region of pastures of Scheidegg (Wengernalp), 6,770 feet a s, and ascending through the heart of towering mountain giants into a dazzling realm of eternal snow and ice, the Jungfraujoch, 11,500 feet a s.

Since it is not everybody's good fortune to be able to also visit Switzerland during the winter months and seeing that snow sports are always in season along the Jungfrau railroad, particularly on the great plateau of the Joch, the railroad imported in 1912 about 20 Polar dogs. A trainer hailing from one of the northlands where dogs are used in various capacities to effect locomotion was established at Eiger Glacier station, 7,620 feet a s, where the director of the line and his entire personnel are settled in a remarkable colony. Here the dogs are accommodated in solidly built, attractive kennels.

Both Eiger Glacier and Jungfraujoch afford splendid opportunities for training and active work. The dogs are taught how to pull a sled over the often perilous glacier fields, with a slight bark they give warning of the approach or presence of an insignificant crevasse and a violent bark denotes that a more dangerous crack is in sight. Climbers setting out on various expeditions via the Eiger Glacier hire now frequently a team of dogs, with a sled and driver, to take care of the irksome transport of knapsacks and supplies and dog-sleigh riding and ski-kjoring, where dogs replace the customary horse, have become popular sports on the Jungfraujoch.

At Eiger Glacier they are ever on the look-out for calls of distress, and rescuing parties dispatched are now, whenever feasible, accompanied by a team of Polar dogs who, as soon as a wounded climber has been located, convey him with sympathetic understanding to the nearest station of the railroad.

The United States has an annual murder record for each 100,000 of population, twenty-five times greater than that of Great Britain, and three times larger than that of Italy.

Letter from Big Chief

There is always something interesting in the holiday traveling experiences. The cars are crowded and one notices less of the commercial life and more of the "home folks" who seem prevaded with a holiday spirit, anticipatory of a pleasant time with relatives and friends. The baggage car ahead is crowded with trunks filled with presents, or possibly the deceased turkey gobbler, the choice of the flock on the home farm being taken to the family "back east." The newness of wearing apparel is also apparent as everyone wears their best Sunday go to meeting clothes when they take a trip of this sort. One cannot help but feel sorry for the kind old farmer compelled to incase his sun burned neck in a starched collar, and his weary old "dogs" in a pair of stiff shoes, and even Grandma in her new shawl and wrap looks a bit of the embarassment of being dressed up for the occasion. The villages through which we pass have a sort of Christmassy air, and the stores that front the railway stations have their windows in the bright green and red accepted holiday colors. The good hard roads (and all country roads are good now) are well traveled by autos and we cease to wonder how Mr. Ford accumulated his millions as fully one-half of the cars seen are of his make.

In the smoking compartment everyone has a pleasant smile and even the grouch who hogs half of the wash stands for his ablutions and shave, tries to look pleasant and when the smoke begins to float, everyone begins to tell of the old home they are to visit, of the old folks, and some really touching reminiscences of "when we were boys." Christmas is in the air, and everyone feels and expresses it, from the sedate old deacon who passes the plate at Sunday services to the fat smiling Jew who travels for "ladies' wear" and regularly travels a thousand miles to eat Christmas dinner at home.

Washington is filled with it and the many institutions have on campaigns for the relief of the poor and suffering. Congress has taken a short vacation but few of the members have left the city. Congressman Sproul and Miss Clara are entertaining at their beautiful apartments on 20th st. Congressman Madden of the first Illinois district is living in his beautiful new home, and has his family with him for the holidays. Congressman-at-large Rathbone is happy over fighting "the solid south," which attempted to block the making of Lincoln's anniversary a national holiday. Englewood will remember Mr. Rathbone, who spoke before numerous associations on "Lincoln," and whose father and mother was with the martyred president in his private box at the theater when he was assassinated.

Most of the foreign embassies are celebrating Christmas in their own way with elaborate receptions and parties and the amount of gold braid and feathers the delegations sport would start a three ring circus for a month. The festive bootlegger certainly thrives here in the nation's capital, and from the official champagne to the colored man's gin, it seems to be plentiful, judging from the after effects observable on the streets and in the public places.

The city is beautifully clean, with its broad streets and hundreds of small squares and circles each embellished with a statute of some one of the nation's heroes or statesmen. There are no factories and hence little or no smoke to stain and disfigure the walls of the beautiful public buildings and magnificent mansions. The northwest section of the city is building up as the most beautiful and every one of the hill tops is graced by wonderful palaces, the homes of the statesmen and rich men who make their homes here. The newspaper men live several miles farther down and just west of 12th st. with the darker complexioned populace. It is estimated that fully one-half of Washington's population is colored, but none are domiciled in the northwest section, as it seems to be an unwritten law, that they keep nearer the river. Most of the servants in private homes, all of whom are colored, go back to their homes to spend the night, except in cases where a separate building is provided for them. It is a regular southern city in many ways, and as the "solid south" always sends a solid delegation of brigadiers with their white mustaches and pointed imperials ala soldier days, they are much in evidence and the twang of the south is much more pronounced in conversation than is that of the northern and western states.

President and Mrs. Coolidge are not much given to private entertaining, especially since the death of their youngest son, but they are genuine Americans, Democratic and just plain folks with the people they do entertain. Silent Cal has made his mark, and is looked upon by all the people with a confidence that is sublime.

The Walter Reed hospital where thousands of shell and shell wracked soldiers are treated is the Mecca of all charitably inclined people at the holidays and the "boys" are well remembered by every organization in the city as well as by many charitable persons. These boys have a lonesome life at the best, many helpless and bedridden, and entertainment for them is a problem which the many musical and educational societies and groups are doing much to provide. Many of the "best" ladies instead of having their "afternoons at home," assemble a group of talent of all kinds and give some of the victims of the war an entertainment at least once a week. It is a noble act and the poor fellows fairly eat up a lively program. While at my daughter's home last night her husband tuned in on WBCN and we visited back home for half an hour. Our good friend "Bill" McDonnell certainly sounded good to us, and the program of songs and instrumental music came in as clear as in the next room. I would suggest to Foster & McDonnell that they announce themselves as from "Englewood-Chicago" and thus advertise our own town with their splendid broadcasting plant.

In my next letter I will try to dig up more personal news of Chicagoans who are here and make it more interesting, but the few days I have been here have been spent playing Santa Claus for my grandchildren, and training up to look as dignified as the surrounding statesmen.

Philippines a Burden to U. S. Predicts Historian

Ramsay Traquair can see no advantage in political control of the Philippines by the United States except as a source of patriotic pride and a possible naval base. We cannot impress our culture on the Pacific by this means he says in discussing "The Coming Commonwealth of the Pacific," in the November Scribner's.

"Between the European power in the south and the great Mongol power in the north lies a tropical zone, rich and populous but not suited to European colonization. Here the United States have occupied the Philippine Islands with their great port, Manila.

"The possession of these islands is, no doubt, a source of patriotic pride to the citizens of the United States, and in the event of war a naval base here might be useful. Beyond this it is difficult to see what great advantage is to be gained to the United States by the continued political control of the Philippines. They cannot support a European population. Like India to the British, they will, at first perhaps, be a source of trade, then a burden and an embarrassment. This view will no doubt appear strained to many, yet we cannot help feeling that the occupation of lands which cannot be colonized for the sake of their trade is in the end unprofitable. It may confer the benefits of stable but alien government for a time, but this can only be temporary. Great Britain is very wisely allowing such lands to slip more and more out of her control, as in Egypt and India. We must remember, too, that the culture of the Pacific, however much it may be founded upon Atlantic culture, will be a native growth, not a thing imposed or controlled from outside."

Left ears are becoming more efficient than those on the right side of the head, according to a professor of the Yale Medical School.

He attributes this to the fact that Americans use the left ear almost exclusively for hearing over telephone receivers.

Although both ears are of equal size, constant use of the left ear in telephoning has made it more efficient than the right one.

Englewood High Has $400 Fire

Without excitement, more than three thousand students at the Englewood high school marched out of the building Friday noon when the fire alarm was rung after a small blaze had been discovered in a class room adjacent to the office of Principal James E. Armstrong.

Defective wiring is believed to have caused the fire. It gained headway between the floor and the basement ceiling while the room was vacant during the lunch period. Smoke had been smelled by the office employees but the fire was not discovered until Harry H. Hornstein, teacher of the bookkeeping classes in the room, returned.

A fire alarm was turned in and the bell for a fire drill was rung. The pupils, more than half of whom were in the hall on their lunch recess, started to file out of the building in orderly fashion, none realizing that the alarm was real. However, some student learned of the fire and pulled one of the switches on the second floor, causing the bells and sirens to sound continuously.

This continued ringing indicated to most of the students that the alarm was not merely for practice but there was no excitement or confusion. All left the building without mishap.

The fire was quickly put under control by the firemen and was extinguished with a loss of only about $400. The students were forced to stand in the cold for only a few minutes for when Principal Armstrong learned the extent of the fire he permitted them to re-enter the building and get their coats from lockers. School was then dismissed over three hours earlier than the regular time.

One of the issues of Uncle Sam's 20-cent air-mail stamps got into circulation with an error, the airplane pictured flying upside down. Only 100 slipped by the inspectors, and while their real value is absolutely nothing collectors are paying as high as $700 for them.

My Heritage

(Written for The Christian Science Monitor)

No sermon thundering above my head,
While my short, starchy skirts
Scarce hid my knees,
Has been remembered through the years.
Still, I recall
My mother's folded handkerchief
Perfumed with lavender,
The heather-leather scent of new kid gloves;
And I can see
The sunlight stream through stained glass, colorful,
To light the dim, high-ceilinged edifice
With radiance half-suppressed.
Reverberating down time's corridors
I hear the roll of organ notes
And feel again that thrill of ecstasy
At some weird minor chord.
No word of any chant remains:
But, oh, the feel of church is in my soul—
The reverence for quiet Sabbath days,
The solemn hush within the House of God,
And prayerful lifting up of holy thoughts
Is now my heritage.

A Special New Year's Greeting to All My Friends and Patrons

By

MRS. BURD GRAY

THE CELEBRATED HERBALIST

6429 Yale Avenue
Office Entrance, Side Door

Office Hours--8 a. m. to 7 p. m.
No Visiting Hours on Saturdays and Mondays

To my many friends and patrons I wish to extend my most sincere and heart-felt wishes that the New Year will bring you health, wealth, happiness and prosperity and that God in His infinite love will bless you richly as you journey along the pathway of life.

Truly, we have been a fortunate nation. In a material and spiritual way we have made great progress. Both are necessary--the one to give sustenance to the body and the other to bring peace of mind and heart and to enable us to perform our sacred duty in the work of guiding the "foot-steps of the human race to higher ground."

You have all been very good to me. You have aided me in my chosen line of endeavor and you have been my true-hearted, warm-hearted supporters in all that I have tried to do and in all that I have been able to accomplish.

And so at this time I again wish to greet you, one and all, and to extend to you my most sincere and true-hearted wishes that the year 1925 will bring many, many blessings and a great amount of happiness. Those are my wishes and I am sure you will find the coming year the best of all the years that have come and gone and that Providence, all-wise and all-powerful and all-good, will bestow His manifold blessings upon each and every one of you as the days, the weeks and the months come and go.

SULLIVAN'S SENSE AND NONSENSE

Time and Service

Time turns on golden hinges
The doors to service true!
They swiftly close around us,
Unless we enter thru!
The words we might have spoken,
The good we might have done,
Bring but a sad remembrance—
Then comes the setting sun.
—Selected.

The wife is either the making or unmaking of the man.

Here is wishing you a very happy and prosperous New Year.

It isn't necessary to swear off; just don't do it again.

The average man is a poor judge of his own importance.

The statute books are cemeteries where many good laws are buried.

An eccentric woman is one who dresses for comfort instead of looks and style.

Strange, although we all value the bride very highly, she is always given away.

Many a self-made man would turn out another and different job if given the second chance.

A short residence in Washington while Congress is in session makes one doubt that some of the members ever heard of the father of this country, who never told a lie.

The father asked Clarence his reason for wanting to marry his daughter, Lucille. The young man: "I have no reason sir: I am in love."

There is one thing to the credit of bobbed hair. Instead of the Police Gazette you now find the Ladies Home Journal in our barber shops.

"The only thing for you to do is to go around and ask her to forgive you." "But I was in the right." "Then you'd better take some flowers and candy with you, too."

Nora—"The fellow I used to keep company with has asked me to go to the fireman's costume ball, but I don't know what to impersonate." Maggie—"Why not go as an old flame?"

There is a crusade in the east to do away with billboard advertising that destroys the natural beauties of the scenery. Better not. How would we know what brand of cigarettes to smoke or whose face dope to use?

The Commercial association are determined to light up the way of darkness between Wentworth ave. and State st. If the railroad companies won't do it, the merchants of 63rd st. will.

A certain professor at the University of Chicago, after a trying first-hour class said: "Some time ago my doctor told me to exercise early every morning with dumb-bells. Will the class please join me tomorrow morning before breakfast?"

He kissed her in a burst of passion. "You have no business to do that," she shrilled at him. "It wasn't business," he replied sweetly. "It was pleasure."

Engineer: "And poor Harry was killed by a revolving crane."

Englishwoman: "My word! What fierce birds you have in America."

The foreman was going from one man to another with a sheet of paper in his hand. When he came to Sandy M'Kie he said: "Sandy, this is a subscription to get a wreath for Jock Stuart, who died last week, and all your mates have given a shilling each toward it." "Och, mon," replied Sandy. "That'll make me an' Jock square noo. He owed me a bob, onyway."

The rightful head of a colored family had been out late flirting with the elusive Lady Luck in the form of a pair of dice. As he came in the door he looked up to find his wife standing in the middle of the floor and staring at him steadily. Even her bulky form failed to entirely screen the rolling pin behind her back. "Has you had any luck?" she demandde, a deep frown upon her majestic brow. The errant shifted his feet uneasily. "Well, honey, I kain't say that I'se had much luck," he replied, beginning to scratch his head meditatively, "but I'se done consid'rable to avert de danger of de income-tax collector."

A big burly man called at the rectory, and when the door was opened, asked to see the rector's wife, a woman well known for her charitable impulses. "Madam," he addressed her in a broken voice, "I wish to draw your attention to the terrible plight of a poor family in this district. The father is dead, the mother is too ill to work, and the nine children are starving. They are about to be turned into the street unless some one pays their arrears in rent, which amount to $60 or $70." "How terrible!" exclaimed the lady. "May I ask who you are?" The sympathetic visitor applied his handkerchief to his eyes. "I'm the landlord," he sobbed.

An employer, noted for his energy and lack of tolerance for loafing in any form, visited his stock room and found a boy leaning idly against a packing case, whistling cheerily and with nothing at all on his mind. The chief stopped and stared. Such a thing was unheard of in his establishment. "How much are you getting a week?" he demanded, with characteristic abruptness. "Twelve dollars." "Here's your twelve. Now, get out. You are through." As the boy philosophically pocketed the money and departed, the boss turned to the chief clerk and demanded: "Since when has that fellow been with us?" "Never, that I know of," was the response. "He just brought over a note for us from Binx & Jinx."

Death of "Uncle" Steve Francis

Stephen C. Francis, better known as Uncle Steve, died at his residence, 6311 Eggleston ave., December 23. Mr. Francis came to Englewood in 1878, and for twenty years was associated in business with his son, John W., who was proprietor of the Englewood Fair, 63rd and Eggleston. Mr. Francis was born in Muskingdon county, Ohio, in 1832, and had he lived until June would have been 93 years old. He was a very active member of Geo. G. Mead Post, G. A. R., and was the oldest living member. It was on his way to one of the meetings a week ago that he was taken ill. He was also a member of the I. O. O. F. for over sixty years. Annual Christmas Party of Englewood Woman's Club

The annual Christmas party for the children of the members of the Englewood Woman's club will be held at the Englewood Masonic temple, at 68th and Wentworth ave., on Tuesday, December 30.

On account of the long program the party will begin promptly at 2 o'clock. Two especially splendid features of this program will be Dr. Pierce and his wife, who will give an hour of magic mystery and entertainment for the children, and Mr. Everett Davis, familiarly known as the "Scissor Zoo" man, will delight the children with his animal cut-outs and silhouettes. Dancing and refreshments will follow this delightful program.

Commonwealth Trust and Savings Bank Opens New Building

Thousands Visit Institution Saturday at Wentworth Ave. and 69th St.

Visitors totaling more than 10,000 men and women inspected the new home of the Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank at Wentworth ave. and 69th st., Saturday from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night.

The first day's business consisted of 600 new accounts. Floral pieces of elaborate design, representing $1,000 worth of blooms, filled the corridors. An orchestra played day and evening.

Cigars and 5,000 roses were presented to the visitors. Oiled paper rain hoods to protect women's hats were given away. The reception committee, including officers of the bank, consisted of Ernest E. Hart, president; Edward B. Lucius, vice-president; Russell L. Blount, cashier and vice-president; and George V. Olson, assistant cashier.

Directors who welcomed friends and patrons were Joseph Dimond, R. C. Foster, Charles R. Fuller, Edgar James, Cornelius S. Kelly, James F. McGlone, E. A. Rysdon, W. F. Voight, and Frank C. Weber.

Since April, 1919, the bank had been located in a building at 75th st. and Vincennes ave., measuring 20 by 50 feet. Its business increased until the quarters no longer accommodated the growth of the institution. During the last year the volume of business has doubled. The former capital of $100,000 has become $200,000 now, and the surplus of $20,000 has grown to $75,000, Mr. Blount stated Tuesday.

The present bank building is considered one of the finest in the city and has been built of terra cotta, with Corinthian pillars at the entrance and an Italian marble interior. The floors are of terrazza. A skylight occupying four-fifths of the roof lights the place in the daytime, and at night 100 electric lights concealed above it give illumination.

A special ventilation system of fans above the roof keeps the air fresh. The structure's dimensions are 40x145 feet. There are three vaults and 4,000 safety deposit boxes. A door weighing sixteen tons closes the vault and is large enough for use in a $10,000,000 bank, according to the cashier.

Incident to its removal, the bank practically doubled its staff of employes. The twelve booths in the bank are of plate glass, supplanting the old-fashioned metal cages.

Jack Dalton Curio Man Fights Off the Police

Barricading the doors of his "curio" shop at 227 W. 63rd st. Monday morning, "Capt." Jack A. Dalton became insane and defied the Englewood police to enter as he stood on guard with a shotgun.

Dalton had complained to the police of the theft of merchandise from his store, and Sergt. Coffey was sent to investigate the complaint. When he arrived at the store the "Captain" met him with a gun in each hand and threatened to shoot. Sergeant Coffey withdrew and called the Englewood police station for reserves. In the meantime Dalton had piled cases and books about the front and back doors of the store.

Captain Michael Lee ordered a dozen officers to the scene, and while some stood outside to prevent pedestrians from being shot should the "Captain" fire through the front window, the rest of the detail broke in the back door and placed him under arrest.

He had "cleared the decks for war," and on searching the place the police found two small boys hid under a mattress. They told the police that they worked for Dalton and received books in pay. They were turned over to their parents.

Complaints have often been made in regard to Dalton's practice of harboring children in the store, and many attempts have been made to evict him from the premises. According to the police, he was recently released from an asylum for the insane, where he had been confined for four years.

Judge Francis B. Allegretti ordered him sent to the psychopathic hospital for examination Tuesday when he was arraigned in the Grand Crossing court on a disorderly conduct charge. Should he be found sane, he will be tried January 9.
